

Expect To Sink Oil Well Sept. 1st

ENGINEERS PREPARING FOR OIL OPERATIONS

The promoters who are planning to drill for oil in Frankfort and Green Garden townships expect to begin drilling operations by Sept. 1. Just where the first well will be sunk has not been announced. A big drilling outfit at Beecher is to be moved here. Oil leases have been obtained on about 8,000 acres in both townships. The bulk of the leases are to the south in Green Garden and to the east and northeast of Frankfort.

Mokena Defeats

Homer A. C.

Mokena Aces took a good hold on themselves Sunday and beat Homer 5 to 1. The boys sure made the Homer lads look sick. West was the first man up for Homer, popping up to McGovney. White was the second man up grounding out to Marti. Bengston struck out. Benson was Mokena's first man up got "HPB". Marti was second man up poking out a hit pushing Benson to second. Cappel, McGovney, Muehler all struck out in a row. Uthe was first up in the second inning getting a hit. McCahley followed with a hit also. Hosiabar had a fielders choice. Then Uthe was caught off third. Cannon hit a fly ball to McGovney, McGovney tapped second base making a double play. Mokena scored first in the third with one run, then again in the eighth with four more.

Homer scored one in the seventh and that was all they could get.

The Mokena boys were surely out for blood this Sunday, and they sure got it. In the eighth inning Marti was first up getting a double. Cappel was second man up striking out. McGovney was third man up grounding out.

Every one thought that this was about all when Bill Muehler came to bat but he fooled them. He hit a high ball to the third baseman who walked back to get it with the crowd yelling their lungs out for him to look out or he would miss it, which is just what he did. By this time Jimmie was rounding third on the home stretch.

Brownie was next man up hitting a long hard fly out towards center taking the boys by surprise, scoring Bill. Ed was next up getting on by the second baseman's error. By this time Brown was on third, when Ed stole second the catcher threw the ball there and Brownie scored.

Shorty was next up getting a nice hit scoring Ed. Patty was next up hitting a long hard fly out to the left fielder who stabbed it for the third out.

Homer came up already to score but Patty struck the first two men out and walked the pitcher, and then struck out the next man ending the ole ball game. Mokena 5. Homer 1.

Tinley School Will

Open Sept. 4th

The Tinley Park public school will open Tuesday, September 4th with a new principal and a new janitor.

Albert Meyer, is the new principal and John Manzke is the new janitor, who was recently engaged by the local Board of Education from a list of ten applicants.

Gerald W. Dunn

New Principal of Mokena School

Gerald W. Dunn of Charleston, Illinois, has been engaged by the Mokena school directors as the new principal of the Mokena public school for the ensuing term, succeeding M. E. John who recently resigned in order to take up an assistant professorship at Cornell University at Ithaca, New York.

Mr. Dunn has been an instructor in the public schools in Charleston the past six years and also holds a University of Illinois degree. He is married and will move his family to Mokena next week.

Edward Martie will be the new janitor, succeeding Ernest Lehnert. The Mokena school opens Tuesday morning, September 4th.

Church Union--

Is It Possible?

By Rev. W. J. Geffert, Pastor
Immanuel Lutheran Church, Mokena

"Let us unite, let us organize!"—that is the cry of today. In the business and political world unions have been a success as long as their ends and aims were fair and honest, but a dismal failure whenever dishonesty and insincerity brought them into being. In union there is strength—for good AND FOR EVIL.

There is much talk about unions in the Christian Church today. Why must the Church remain divided? Why not join hands? Why all this controversy among people who are working for the same purpose? Why not unite for the common good of all? Those and similar questions form the topic of discussion around the cracker barrel in the country store as well as the mahogany desk in the business office in the city. Many agree that there ought to be only one Jewish, one Catholic and one Protestant Church.

While every sincere Christian deplores the divided state of the Church the question remains: Is it possible to bring about the desired union. It is, if the cause for division is found AND CORRECTED. The Christian Church is divided because men have forced their own interpretations upon the Bible instead of simply accepting its teaching. That cause must first be corrected before Churches can speak about a union. As long as men insist on their own interpretations there is no UNITY. And as long as there is no UNITY there can be no UNION. A true Church union demands perfect unity of doctrine. Now then, do the Church Union movements of our day proceed from a desire for perfect unity. They DO NOT. This may seem an uncharitable accusation, but when one considers the fact that two Church bodies are willing to unite on the basis of their different confessional writings, then certainly a person can draw only one conclusion: "It does not matter what you believe". Such a spirit of inferentialism breeds an attitude which not only denies the clearness of the Bible but rejects its authority. To make this clear consider the following facts:

Within the Protestant Churches today you will find those who accept and those who deny the deity of Christ; those who accept and those who deny the Holy Trinity; those who accept and those who reject the inspiration of the Bible; those who accept and those who reject certain evolutionary theories. Space does not permit mention of a hundred and one other so called "minor issues" on which people of the Protestant Churches disagree. What then will be the basis on which these bodies can unite. Only one basis is possible: "Believe as you please. It does not matter what you believe". Is that true unity? God preserve us from such hypocrisy! The way to TRUE union is clear. Let the churches reject all teachings not in harmony with the Bible, and a union well pleasing to God has been attained. As soon as Churches try to compromise their differences then the very foundation of religion has been destroyed. While Church union is something to be desired, Romans 16, 17 holds good unto the end of time: "Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offenses contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned, and AVOID them."

EX-WIFE SUES SECOND WIFE FOR $50,000

Valuing the love of her husband at $50,000, Mrs. Esther O'Brien, 42 of Chicago, has filed an alienation of affection suit for that amount in the Superior Court of Cook County thru her attorney, Norman Becker.

The man in the case is John D. O'Brien, 44, an official of the Rock Island railroad, from whom Mrs. O'Brien was divorced in July of this year.

The woman named is Mrs. Kate Horras O'Brien, whom Mr. O'Brien married a few days after divorcing his first wife.

The first Mrs. O'Brien charges in her bill that before and after August 15, 1931, Kate Horras stole her husband's love. Last February Mrs. O'Brien filed a cross bill against Mrs. O'Brien, and the hearing lasted until 1 o'clock in the morning. Judge La Buy then threw it out of court, judging it to be without merit.

At that time Mr. O'Brien charged his wife with cruelty, testifying that she pounded him on the head with a silver slipper.

The above account appeared in the Chicago Evening American on Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Kate Horras O'Brien was a former Mokena resident.

Meet After 34 Years Separation

A family reunion was held in the summer home of Mrs. Cora Eberhard McGlashen near Frankfort on Saturday, August 11th. The guest list was as follows: Effa Eberhard Diamond of San Diego, Calif., Mr. and Mrs. Ben F. Eberhard of Mill-edgeville, Georgia; Henry Eberhard, of Strong City, Oklahoma and Dr. Ira Eberhard of Chicago. Two of the brothers and sisters had not seen each other in 34 years.

On Friday Mrs. Cora McGlashen, Effa Diamond, and Henry Eberhard went to Chicago to visit for some time with Dr. Ira Eberhard and later all four will motor to California where they will spend the winter.

Orland Farm

Home Awarded

First Prize

An Orland farm home carried off first honors in the neat farmstead contest sponsored by the Pure Milk Association.

At the picnic of district 13 of the Pure Milk Association held at Troy on Tuesday, Mr. and Mrs. John Cooper of Orland township were announced the district winners. The Cooper farm home was given a 98 per cent rating, the highest score made in the seven locals entered. The proud owners were presented a $25 check for the district title, a $10 check for local honors and an "honor plaque" by PMA officials for display at the winning home.

The Cooper home was given practically a perfect rating in every phase of the contest requirements. Based on neatness of the farm home, the appearance of the outbuildings and the condition of the stock, the judging thoroughly covered every detail of the competing farmsteads.

In addition to Mr. and Mrs. John Cooper, the following also were in the winners list: Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Geuther, Mokena local; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Drauden, Plainfield local; Mr. and Mrs. T. T. Tesdall of Wilmington local; Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Andres, Tinley Park local; Mr. and Mrs. Hilbert Elvers, Mat-teson local.

Channahon Milk

Maid Breaks Record

At the Pure Milk Association picnic of district 13 held Tuesday at Troy, Miss Lorraine Jennings, 22 years old of Channahon township, won the milkmaid's contest and established a new world's record. She milked a pure bred Holstein cow owned by Morgan Lewis of Peotone and drew 22.1 pounds of milk in three minutes, shattering by .3 of a pound the old mark of 21.8 set by Mabel Bettenhausen of Tinley Park at last year's PMA picnic.

Finishing behind the two leaders came Miss Dorothy Elam, of the Wilmington PMA local, with 14.6 pounds, Miss Laura Bachman, Man-hattan local, with 14.2; Miss Rose Bormet, Tinley Park local, 13.8; Miss Emma Gates, Wilmington local, 13.1; and Miss Hulda Bachman, Laura's sister with 12.4.

Horseshoe Pitching Contest to be Feature At Legion Picnic

The Tinley Park Post of the American Legion will hold a picnic and dance Sunday, August 26th at the Saenger Hall in Tinley Park. There will be a band concert and many games with dancing in the evening.

A horse shoe pitching contest is to be one of the main attractions and the following cash prizes will be awarded:

Single.
1st, $2.50; 2nd $1.50; 3rd $1.00.
Double.
1st, $5.00; 2nd, $2.50; 3rd $1.50.

This contest will be on afternoon and evening.

Music will be furnished by Wesley Barlow and his orchestra.

Admission free to hall and grove. Everyone welcome.

Mission Tag Day

Will Be Sept. 8th

Frankfort township will do its part to answer the appeal of the board of directors of the Morning Star Mission to the public for funds to continue operation of the Mission and the appeal will be sounded from Sept. 4th to 8th this year.

The drive will be climaxed with a tag day drive Saturday, Sept. 8th after business men, manufacturers and homes have been contacted in an effort to raise funds to help the Mission remain out of the red.

Let everyone do the best they possibly can when the taggers come to them on September 8th.

For almost 25 years Peter McCarthy has assisted transients and homeless people by providing them with shelter and food at his Mission on North Collins street in Joliet. Many times he has supplied these unfortunates with clothes and in many instances he has afforded them with transportation back to their homes.

"Pete" McCarthy's Mission as it is described by unfortunates, has housed many who later received a "break" and now hold positions of prominence and honor.

To Dedicate School Land to Widen Curve

A meeting of the school trustees of Frankfort township and the Mokena school directors will be held this Friday night in the office of Frank J. Kohlhaugen township school treasurer, relative to dedicating 16 feet off the old school house lot on Front street in Mokena in order to widen out a curve in the road at this point. It is understood that the Front street which is a state aid road, may be repaired thru the gas tax.

Bogus $10 Bills In Circulation

Look out for bogus ten dollar bills. Last week a stranger drove up to a filling station near Frankfort and purchased gasoline and tendered a $10 bill in payment. The stranger was given the proper change and after the filling station operator found the bill was worthless. The bill was so near perfect that it took an expert to detect that it was counterfeit.

Mokena Garden Club Will Show Slides

Mrs. Anton Benson of Mokena is always deeply interested in gardening and flowers and recently secured a large number of subscriptions to a gardening magazine and was enabled to secure slides on landscape gardening which will be shown free under the auspices of the Mokena Garden Club at the village park in Mokena the evening of August 30th at 8 p. m. A musical program will also be presented in which the Hall Trio will render Hawaiian selections.

If unsettled weather should prevail the program will be held in the Mokena M. E. church. Everyone is invited. Remember the date and remember everything is free.

Tinley Boy Badly Cut By Mower

The small son of Walter Brandan of Tinley Park was quite badly hurt one day last week when he got too close to a mowing machine which his father was operating and the sickles of the mower cut his right ankle quite badly. He was taken to the St. Francis hospital in Blue Island.

Evitt's Stop & Shop Opens at Mokena This Saturday

That people have faith in Mokena as a good trading territory is being evidenced this week by the fact that a neat grocery store will open its doors to the public Saturday morning of this week.

The new business is to be known as "Evitt's Stop and Shop".

Mrs. Wm. Evitt will conduct the new store. A complete line of staple groceries and specials will be carried.

As the opening of school is near at hand, this new store will also have a nice line of school supplies on hand.

Mrs. Evitt formerly conducted a similar store in Chicago and has had considerable experience in the merchandising line.

The new store is located in the building formerly occupied by the Royal Blue Store across the street from the Rock Island depot.

Orland To Be

Represented at Fair

If you are attending the World's Fair next Monday, August 27th and stop in the lounge on the second floor of the Social Science Building, you will be welcomed to the Illinois Federation of Women's Club by two of the members of the Orland Park Woman's Club, the president, Mrs. Ella M. Loebe and Mrs. Elizabeth Graves. These ladies are doing their part as members of the 3rd district to make you feel welcome.

Tinley Boy Scalped In Accident

The small son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Hermesmyer of Tinley Park was scalped in an accident Wednesday morning. Remodeling work is being done in the Hermesmyer tavern and a beer coil box was resting on temporary supports while the bar is being remodelled. The lad pulled on the box which suddenly toppled over and the point of a facuet hit him above the forehead and peeled his scalp off. A workman in the place quickly put the scalp in place and the lad was rushed to the office of Dr. R. H. Carmichael. The lad is getting along nicely.

Orland Home

Destroyed By Fire

The James Cannon family who have been living in the Huff garage building at Orland Park was burned out Monday morning when an oil stove is said to have exploded while the family was being done. Practically all the household goods were destroyed. The Orland Park Fire Department responded quickly to the alarm but the flames had made such rapid headway that there was no chance to save anything. The building was partly burned down.

LATEST--THIEF STEALS BIBLE

We have heard about thieves stealing everything from safes weighing tons to red hot stoves, which of course is not exciting news, but when a theft out of the ordinary nature is committed, then it becomes real news. And when a thief steals a copy of the Holy Bible, then surely the theft becomes a REAL piece of news.

Well such a theft is reported from the Lincoln Estates located on the Lincoln Highway east of Frankfort. The Veterans of Foreign Wars always have a Bible in their headquarters in what they call "The Barn." Recently a thief entered this place and STOLE THE BIBLE!

Either the poor thief was penitent and sought to study the Bible which warns against stealing, or he was so depraved that he just took it for pure meanness sake. However, it is hoped that the thief will read the Good Book and be turned from the error of his ways.

Champion Milk Maid

Miss Mabel Bettenhausen of Tinley Park Saturday won the World's Fair Milking contest, one of the last events of farm week at the Fair.

Miss Bettenhausen drew fifteen and one fourth pounds of milk in the allotted three minutes time. She was awarded $75 and a medal. This was a national championship milking contest.

Pay For S. W.

Right of Way

This week there was renewed interest in the Southwest Highway project thru Orland township when the checks in payment for right of way outside of the village limits of Orland Park, were received by the parties who dedicated land for the right of way from Alpine to the Orland Park village limits sometime ago.

A force of surveyors have been at work at Orland Park for several weeks surveying for a route thru the incorporated part of the village to 142nd street. Just what route will be followed thru the village has not been announced as yet.

To Play In Tourn.

The Mokena baseball team will play in a tournament at Frankfort, Sunday, August 26th. The teams competing will be Mokena, Homer, Symerton and Will County Farm Bureau. The arrangement of games is as follows:

Latorra Family Probably Holds the Record

MIKE LATORRA and his wife (at right of line) with their nineteen children, of Chicago, were honored by officials of A Century of Progress as the largest recorded living family of Italian parentage in the United States. Mike is especially proud of the fact that they have gone through the depression on their own power, with not a cent of charity.

Bedtime Story for Children

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

ANOTHER MEMBER OF A BIG FAMILY

PETER RABBIT was just about to ask if he might go along with Chewink and see his nest when a new voice broke in. "What are you fellows talking about?" it demanded, and there flitted just in front of Peter a little bird the size of a sparrow, but lovelier than any sparrow of Peter's acquaintance. At first glance he seemed to be all blue, and such a lovely bright blue! But as he paused for an instant Peter saw that his wings and tail were mostly black, and that the lovely blue was brightest on his head and back. It was Indigo the Bunting.

"You Ought to Be Thankful, Peter Rabbit, That You Haven't a Coat Like His."

"We were talking about our family," replied Chewink. "I was telling Peter that we belong to the largest family among the birds."

"But you didn't say anything about Indigo," interrupted Peter. "Do you mean to say that he belongs to the same family?"

"I surely do," replied Indigo. "I'm rather closely related to the Sparrow branch. Don't I look like a Sparrow?"

Peter looked at Indigo closely. "In size and shape you do," he confessed, "but just the same I should never in the world have thought of connecting you with the Sparrows."

"How about me?" asked another voice, and a little brown bird flew up beside Indigo, twitching her tail nervously. She looked very sparrow-like. Indeed, so much so that had not Peter seen her with her handsome mate, for she was Mrs. Indigo, he certainly would have taken her for a sparrow. Only on her wings and tail was there any of the blue which made Indigo's coat so beautiful, and this was only a faint tinge.

"I'll have to confess that so far as you are concerned it isn't hard to think of you as related to the Sparrows," declared Peter. "Don't you sometimes wish you were as handsome as Indigo?"

Mrs. Indigo shook her head in the most decided way. "Never," she declared. "I have worries enough raising a family as it is, but if I had a coat like his I wouldn't have a moment of peace. You have no idea how I worry about him sometimes. You ought to be thankful, Peter Rabbit, that you haven't a coat like his. It attracts altogether too much attention."

Peter tried to picture himself in a bright blue coat and laughed right out at the mere thought and the others joined with him. Then Indigo flew to the top of a tall tree and began to sing. It was a lively song and Peter enjoyed it thoroughly. Mrs. Indigo took this opportunity to slip away unobserved, and when Peter looked around for Chewink, he, too, had disappeared. He had gone to tell Mrs. Chewink that he was quite safe and that she had nothing to worry about.

QUESTION BOX

By ED WYNN . . . The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am a boy eight years old, and am in the fourth grade at school. My teacher has offered a prize for the boy who can write a sentence with the two words "Peaches" and "Gruesome" in the same sentence. Can you help me out?

Yours truly,

A. TRUANT.

Answer: Sure I can help you. Here is a sentence with both words you mention in it: "The man planted an orchard full of trees and 'gruesome' peaches."

Dear Mr. Wynn:

What is meant when they say: "A man died standing up?"

Truly yours,

M. BALMER.

Answer: When a man dies standing up it means his feet are so large he can't fall over.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

My father and I like to go to the theater. We are both very fond of all kinds of shows. But after every show we disagree as to its merits. He insists the shows today are not like the shows when he was my age. If there is any difference will you kindly tell me about it?

Truly yours,

I. C. PLAYS.

Answer: The only difference I notice is that it has changed from the "ears" to the "eyes." What I mean is, years ago we used to go to the theaters to hear "new ditties," now we go to the theater to see "nudities."

THE NIGHT BEFORE YOUR BIRTHDAY

By ANNE CAMPBELL

THIS spent year will not come again,
A happy year of childhood done,
When every path was broad and plain,
And there was never dearth of sun.

You may not call its magic back.
Although Time gives you wisdom's gold;
And often you will feel the lack
Of its allure when you are old.

A careless, happy, sunny year
Has slipped into the evening skies.
For you the future has no fear.
It climbs on straight to Paradise.

Upon each birthday eve, dear child,
May you with the same trustful gaze,
Look backward on hours undefiled,
And forward to enchanting days!

Results in Thyroid Operations

ONE of the problems facing both patient and physician in goiter or thyroid ailments is whether an operation should be performed at once or whether treatment by rest, iodine, X-ray or other methods should first be tried.

Now no one likes the idea of an operation because there is the anesthetic, the time in hospital with its expense, and the danger of the operation. Naturally then if all this can be avoided it would seem like good sense to wait.

However, physicians always keep in mind that the extra juice from the thyroid gland makes the heart beat more rapidly all the time and this extra work, together with poisons in the system, can so damage the heart that rest and other forms of treatment are of no avail.

Therefore we now find that the condition of the heart itself and the strength of its muscular walls in pumping the blood, is the factor that influences the physician whether or not to advise operation. In fact many surgeons favor operation even when heart symptoms are mild.

What is this operation?

The operation consists in the removal of a large part, but not all, of the thyroid gland in the neck. In former times this operation was considered so dangerous that patients traveled hundreds and often thousands of miles to have it performed by some renowned surgeon. Today, in practically every hospital, surgeons are performing this operation with splendid results and with a very low death rate.

Thus Dr. J. de J. Pemberton in Journal of Surgery and Obstetrics reports a death rate of less than 1 per cent.

What about the results obtained by operation?

Statistics from Kocher's clinic in Vienna and Mayo's clinic, Rochester, Minn., give 86 per cent of satisfactory results after operation in serious cases of the severe type of goiter.

The thought, then, is that where rest and other forms of treatment are not giving results in these thyroid cases when the heart is affected, the earlier the case is turned over to the surgeon the less danger there is from the operation.

Sometimes the operation is performed because the patient can't spare the time required by the rest treatment.

Overweight Individuals

OVERWEIGHT individuals will cut down on bread, potatoes, pastry, butter and cream, in an effort to reduce their weight, but will continue to drink large quantities of water and other liquids, because liquids do not put on fat.

Strictly speaking, liquids do not put on fat tissue, but they do put on weight and they do prevent fat from being used up as readily as it would be were the liquids not taken.

It isn't a matter of water not being good for all mankind. Water is the very first thing needed to maintain the proper working of the body, just as food is needed to provide the structure of the body.

But the body at all times has a good supply of water on hand, and only needs a certain amount every day to keep its needs supplied.

Just as you see storage tanks of water on the roofs of factories to be used in an emergency, so all your tissues have a goodly supply of water stored away. This water is not in any one place like the storage tank, but in and about all the tissues, and actually forming part of the tissues themselves.

When you exercise and the perspiration pours out on the surface of the skin, then your tissues have given up that much water and you are just that much lighter in weight. Some fat tissue has been used up by the exercise, but water makes up most of the weight lost.

If, however, after exercising and losing all this water, or even if you simply perspire without taking exercise, and because you feel thirsty drink three or four glasses of water then immediately you are just that much heavier again.

With those of normal weight, this perspiring and then drinking water is helpful to the system; in fact it is helpful also to the overweight individual in a general way, but as a matter of fact he doesn't need all this water, and it only increases his weight.

In other words the tissues and spaces of the overweight hold so much more water than he needs, that he has really too large a "storage tank" of water. Thus if he loses considerable water by perspiration and uses up some of the water in his storage tank, he is bound to lose some of his weight.

Lioness Loose in Circus

When the electric lights went out during a lion act of a circus in Cardiff, Wales, recently, five beasts were caught in the dark. Attendants lit matches. Carrying a torch, the trainer managed to get four beasts back into their cages, but the fifth, a lioness, was missing. After a search, she was found in another part of the tent, badly frightened, and was happy to return to her cage. The audience of 1,500 thought it all was part of the show, and enjoyed it.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

Washington.—The administration at last has taken advantage of the authority given the Chief Executive by congress in the silver purchase law and has "nationalized" silver. It has placed itself in the position where it becomes virtually the sole purchaser of silver in the United States and from which position it controls, by license, the release of silver stocks for use in industry and the arts.

Silver Problem

Mystery still surrounds the promulgation of the nationalization order. Secretary Morgenthau at the treasury has continued to hold the reasons thereof within his own breast and the result is that a thousand and one interpretations have been placed on the action. The action, like so many having to do with the currency, has proved disconcerting, first because of the secrecy surrounding it and secondly because it has in a way added uncertainty in many lines of commercial endeavor.

That it is inflationary in character, there can be no doubt. The extent, however, is another matter and one about which experts disagree. It will mean the obvious flotation of additional silver certificates in response to the amount of silver acquired and stored by the treasury. This fact doubtless will frighten many persons. Followers of the administration, however, have taken fresh heart from the action and the nationalization order gave such inflationists as Senator Thomas, the Oklahoma Democrat, cause for great joy although the senator believes the inflationary policy should be extended almost to the point of free printing press operation. In business circles, as that opinion is reflected in Washington, there has been a determined stand taken already against what these men fear to be an important move toward uncontrolled and unrestrained inflation.

The best opinion I have been able to obtain—it amounts to a consensus of authorities in whom I have faith—is that the action just taken on silver in and of itself will not be disastrous. The danger, so I am informed, lies, therefore, not in the purchase of silver and the issuing of silver certificates but in the potentialities of the movement. There can be no doubt that once the silver movement gets thoroughly underway that it is only a short step, easily taken, to the use of printing presses and fiat money.

It will be recalled that Mr. Roosevelt said in his inaugural address that he would support an "adequate and sound currency." In the opinion of many observers if he goes no further than the recent silver order he can still find justification for repeating his inaugural declaration.

Obviously the devaluation of the dollar taken about this time last year has proved inadequate to accomplish price increases to the 1926 level — a promise which Mr. Roosevelt frequently made during his campaign. His advisors admit with some freedom that the gold reduction program has not forced the anticipated price boost. This being true, it is only natural as many observers hold that the move regarding silver is intended to supplement the action which cut the gold content of the dollar from one hundred cents to slightly below sixty cents. Whether this further change in the monetary structure will accomplish the desired price level, of course remains to be seen. Administration leaders are hopeful. Old-time sound money men and the conservative thought of the country are distressed.

In some quarters I hear a discussion of the silver action which places the possible interpretation upon it that it is nothing more than a confiscation of commercial stocks of bar silver at a price arbitrarily fixed by the government. Among this school of thought some hold to the opinion in addition that the step is not particularly significant.

Fellow observers, I believe, pretty generally have accepted the silver nationalization as having been partly due to the serious agitation for inflation about which I reported several weeks ago. It is easy to understand how this would come about and why the date of August 9 was selected for promulgation of the new order. Out through the drought stricken areas and in industrial sections where employment is seasonal, summer doldrums of the first order are existent. Discontent along with distress always has and probably always will breed radicalism. The inflation agitation now surely can be said to be fostered mainly by the left wing and the more radical of the politicians. Would it not then be only natural that, having the power accorded him under the silver act, Mr. Roosevelt should seek to alleviate this condition by utilizing the discretionary authority for acquisition of silver?

Everywhere is the question: what will be the effect upon the man in the street? As far as I can learn there is only one answer and that comes out of history. Without any official explanation of the reasons for the current action, observers generally and obviously turn to the past. Thus, they cannot avoid the conclusion that the man in the street, the individual on a salary or wage basis is going to suffer unless the President's program involves some hitherto unknown and undisclosed treatment of this phase of the problem.

The circumstance is simply this: Payrolls and wages almost never rise as rapidly as commodity prices—the things you buy in the corner grocery and the clothes and shoes. Necessarily then the wage earner or the white collar worker has less in his number of dollars with which to buy the commodities upon which the inflationary process has operated to increase the prices.

As one who has spent some eighteen years as a writer on business and financial topics, it seems to me that probably the worst effect from the silver nationalization order is the added uncertainty which it creates. The thing that business generally is recognized as needing most is assurance and security. Mr. Roosevelt has repeatedly made this statement and it may be that later on he will explain how the silver order provides some new security.

In the meantime the sudden acquisition by the government of all the silver stocks has provided a nice profit for holders of domestic silver and has, through the psychological effect, provided an equally nice profit for the owners of common stocks of corporations. Authorities tell me that this result was natural and, therefore, to be expected.

The Federal Housing administration newest and regarded by many as the most potent of the FHA Makes Rapid Strides alphabetical organizations, has made rapid strides in the last few weeks toward getting set for operation. To my mind, three men have been responsible chiefly. These are James A. Moffett, the administrator, Ward Canady, his assistant, and Lambert St. Clair. The latter came down from New York on a loan from his own outfit but the fact that he is here three days and in New York three days each week has not appeared to lessen his accepted value as an organizer.

The law under which the housing administration operates was drafted for the purpose of enabling householders to make repairs and do the other odd jobs around a residence and small business building which so easily are allowed to go undone during periods when money is not flowing freely. It is countrywide in its scope. It will operate through the medium of the banks and local organizations and it is the firm conviction of the officials charged with this responsibility that offers to loan money will come from the banks in greater number now that a federal agency is prepared to "insure" the note which the borrower gives.

It must be understood that these loans are not going to be made with reckless abandon; the prospective borrower must, after all, have some support financially and must be able to show that there is a reasonable chance of repayment. But the point is that a national campaign is about to get underway which will awaken, it is hoped, hundreds of homeowners to the fact that the roof needs repairing or the front porch steps are in bad shape or that paper or plumbing should be looked after.

The law apparently has left several openings which did not appear to those who drafted it. For example one of the housing officials told me that he could see no reason why a farmer would be precluded from building a pond on his land with the aid of loans under the act. It occurred to me that this suggestion was very timely because it is certain that if more farms had had ponds on them a considerable amount of live stock could have been watered during this current drought. I do not assume that the housing administration is going to make an especial drive for a pond on every farm but this illustrates the extent to which the credit will be employed.

In connection with the organization procedure of the housing administration I want to call attention to a condition that exists in Washington about which individuals throughout the country who are seeking jobs ought to know. There were more than thirty thousand applicants for jobs at the housing administration offices. It will employ not to exceed five hundred persons and more than half of the appointments already have been made.

Among those who showed up at the housing headquarters were several men who had come almost the full distance across the continent. They told the personnel officer that there was no work in their home towns so they packed their little grips and came to Washington because there was a new agency created. Others had come from lesser distances and had come for the same reason. It seemed to me that a condition like this ought to be disclosed and the housing officials requested that I report the facts in order that others may not be so misguided as to make the long trek to Washington just in the hope that a job is here—it isn't.

Frogs Reveal the Earth's Past

From Them Scientist Has Learned of Lost Continents and Vanished Seas; Furnish Information of a Long-Ago Ultra Far West.

When the frogs croak you can well imagine, with scientific backing, that you hear the nature songs of lost continents and vanished seas of the past 175,000,000 years.

For, in a new kind of frog geography, the records of these lost places have been found in living frogs by Maynard M. Metcalf of the National museum. His studies are an almost unique method of reading the earth's past. He has published the first report in the official journal, Science.

The frog map shows the possible existence of a great continent in the Pacific, in Triassic times, 175,000,000 years ago. This was Gondwanaland, some evidences of which scientists have found previously by other methods. Gondwanaland probably connected with South America.

Another lost frog continent was Lemuria. It likewise was about 175,000,000 years back, but in the Indian ocean. It appears to have connected Africa, Madagascar, Ceylon, southernmost India, the islands of southwest Maylasia and probably some of the southwestern Malay archipelago islands.

Then the frogs show an ultra-Far West. This was a strip of land west of the present Pacific coast of the United States. It ran from Siberia, down past Alaska, Central America, and perhaps even for a time, Maynard finds, to Ecuador and Chile. Its heyday was 50,000,000 to 100,000,000 years ago.

In this same cretaceous times, there probably wasn't much Texas. Instead the frogs indicate an arm of the sea there, running up from the western Gulf of Mexico all the way into the Arctic ocean.

Finally, 100,000,000 years ago Byrd apparently might have walked to Little America from South America, Australia or Africa, as he chose. Seemingly then there was an extended Antarctica, connecting with all three continents.

The usual method of reconstructing the past is through skeletons of animals, but the frogs left too few bones. Maynard gets his frog map from the "commensals" of these animals.

A commensal is "one who dines at the same board with another or others."

In human society some commensals are honored positions, but in frogs they are just plain parasites. These studied by Mr. Metcalf are the intestinal commensals, the family opalinidae. A remarkable family, too. It has developed 150 species in the 'rog.

These species are the clues to the frog's geographical migrations. He couldn't swim the oceans. There had to be land to account for all the places he has gone. The commensals show where these places were, by the changes they underwent and evolved while dining with the frogs.

Learning to Sleep

The London airdrome sends up rockets to guide airplanes to the landing field in foggy weather; the rockets penetrate the fog and explode brilliantly in the clear sky above.

POETIC PHRASES EVOLVED BY MEN IN PRISON CELLS

If the talk of a gangster and the words of a poet were scrambled, it is hard to say which would yield the larger number of poetic phrases. Does this sound as though written in jest? A list of slang terms used in prison, published in American Speech, offers many a gem for collectors of poetic figures; diamonds in the rough, they might be called. Leaving aside the question whether these are genuine specimens of prison slang—and some of them sound as though they may not be found outside the covers of a crime novel—it is instructive to observe how faithful to the muse of poetry is much that the pickpocket, the swindler or the bank robber says in the course of his trade.

One of the examples compiled by J. Louis Kuehler, of Johns Hopkins University library, is the word "tears" for pearls. There is as much poetry in this as in such an image from Shakespeare as "Those are pearls that were his eyes." Another term from the cells is "sunshine," meaning gold. The phrase "last brightening" is defined in the criminal's thesaurus as "yesterday morning." It might have come from Shelley.

Mercolized Wax

Keeps Skin Young

Absorb hives and discolorations using Mercolized Wax daily as directed. Invisible particles of aged skin are freed and all defects such as blackheads, tan, freckles and large pores disappear. Skin is then beautifully clear, velvety and so soft—face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out your hidden beauty. At all leading druggists.

Powdered Saxolite
Reduces wrinkles and other age signs. Simply dissolve one ounce Saxolite in half-pint witch hazel and use daily as face lotion.

ley. A gangster is "hot" when he is wanted by the police. Shakespeare wrote "how like a winter my absence has been." Here we see merely a reversal in seasons. The criminal who says "vine" for a suit of clothes is no less poetic than Campon when he wrote "There is a garden in her face." When contemporary poetry of the school of T. S. Eliot has wearied of the search for phrases among old Australian ballads or among the verses of medieval Spanish poets it may turn with profit to the cell blocks at Sing Sing and Great Meadow.—New York Sun.

Lockport Legion Post
To Present Play

As the major event of a mammoth four day Fall Festival, John Olson Post, American Legion, Lockport, will sponsor a spectacular community production, "The World's All Right," with a cast of more than 150 persons. The play, which is being directed by Miss Virginia Tisch, will be presented on the evenings of August 31st and September 1, on a specially constructed stage on the Lockport High school Athletic Field. With the entire cast composed of local talent, "The World's All Right" promises to be a note worthy success in the history of local productions.

Dr. J. D. Young plays the part of Jimmy Waddek, owner-announcer of radio station WAB. Helen Ladd is Jane Rogers, Jimmy's secretary.

and fiancée. David Bigelow is Joe, the office boy, who later blossoms into an Al Jolson as Lovin' Sam. Eleanor Kahler, plays the part of Gerie Green, Joe's girl friend.

Tickets may be reserved at Dietrich's drug store in Lockport at no extra charge.

Good Credit Standing
Gets PMA Hay Loan

The good business practices followed by the members of the Pure Milk Association in paying for the hay which was purchased early in the summer has increased their credit rating so that the government has made a new commitment of $20,000 and has extended the credit of the individual to a $200 feed loan payable in four months. This is in place of the $100 loan payable in three payments.

The original commitment was for $200,000, which was later changed to $125,000. Sixty per cent of the 10,000 tons sold was paid for in cash making it necessary for the organization to borrow only $100,000, and of that amount about $60,000 has been paid back. This new commitment will help the members who already find need for the purchase of more hay.

With the cooperation of the Soy Bean Corporation, 30,000 tons of soy bean hay has been contracted for. Ten thousand tons have been bought outright for the members of the Association; twenty thousand to come later.

The Soy Bean Association will place four men in each county where hay is purchased, and these men will supervise the proper cutting, curing and baling of the hay in order that the Pure Milk Association members will be assured of having the very best hay possible.

Local officers have been asked to contact the individual members in their communities to learn their needs so that shipments can be determined without loss of time. Please cooperate by calling your local officer and place your order for hay, if you have any idea that you will need to buy some.

Only Suckers

Only "suckers" pay any attention to the NRA, in the estimation of Chicago city officials. They advertised for street signs. The Day-Brite Reflector Company offered them at 32 cents each. The other bids were uniform at 58 cents. A few days later the Day-Brite Company tried to withdraw its bid, informing the officials it had violated the NRA code. Mayor Kelly ordered the Day-Brite bid accepted and the company be held to its bond, filed with the bid.

Woman's Club to

Sponsor Musical

Afternoons

The music department of the Third Congressional District, Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, under the chairmanship of Mrs. John C. Seegar of Gage Park Woman's Club, will sponsor the first of a series of musical afternoons at the I. F. W. C. Lounge on the second floor of the Social Science Building at the Century of Progress. The program will consist of groups of songs by the Third District Chorus, the Forest Ridge Trio, the Marquette Manor Woman's Choral Club, and solos by members of the various groups. Mrs. J. F. Groves will direct the Third District Chorus and Mrs. Seegar will act as accompanist. Mrs. Michael P. Molitor will direct the Marquette club and Mrs. George Tarnay will act as accompanist.

Sept. 19th is Illinois Federation Day at the Century of Progress. As there are more than 75,000 members in the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs this day will be outstanding. Following are the high lights of the day's program:

At 12:30 p. m., there will be a luncheon in the Trustees Lounge in the Hall of Science. All Third district club women make reservations with Mrs. O. O. Oudekirk, 8741 Aberdeen Street.

At 3 o'clock Mrs. Wm. Piggott, state music chairman, will present a program of unusual merit, several artists being scheduled to appear.

At 5 o'clock there will be a reception in the I. F. W. C. Lounge in the Social Science Building. Everybody is welcome.

Amongst those attending were Mr. and Mrs. Roy Holm, Vivian, Everett and Heryn Holm, Peter Smith, Mrs. Charles Lauffer, Gerald Hewitt, Mrs. Marie Ott, Tracy White, Mr. and Mrs. Reed Burch and family, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Casper and family, Willard Rowley and sons, Robert Burch, Bruce Anderson Mrs. Otto Konow and children, Geo. Bump, Sr., and Stanley Jungles.

Mr. Bump took advantage of the chinch bug epidemic and took up 5 quarts of the pests for which he received 10 tickets. Mr. Bump talked over WLS during the dinner bell program and everyone who heard him, say he sounded very natural and would make a fine radio announcer.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee White and daughter Shirley of Pryse, Kentucky arrived Sunday at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George White. While here they will visit a Century of Progress.

Gloria Welter is on the sick list. Mildred, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jungles is also sick.

Mrs. Joseph Miller and daughters Nevaline and Elizabeth attended a dancing party at the hall in De Salm Thursday evening.

For several days, the dog owned by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Beaver acted queerly so on Thursday Edward killed him, suspecting he was mad, and took the head to the Chicago Pasteur Institute where Dr. Lagoria examined it and found it had rabies. Altho no one knows that their dog was bitten by it, still it was deemed wise to use every precaution, so many of the nearby neighbors are keeping their dogs tied now and under close observation.

Roland Wilson has returned to the home of his grandmother, Mrs. Guy Bump, after a week's vacation with relatives in Indiana.

Mrs. Irving Volrath and little daughter are ill with Summer Flu.

George Wheeler, who has been confined to the Silver Cross hospital the past six weeks, expects to be removed to his home here this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rodgers had as dinner guests Sunday, the former's father, Wm. Rodgers and Wm. Birdsell of Joliet.

Mrs. Clarence G. Rowley and daughter Betty are enjoying a weeks vacation at Elmer Rowley home in Chicago Heights.

The Misses Margaret and Eloise Welter, Evelyn Kopelman, Margaret Boyce and Lois Ott entertained a group of thirty young people at a dancing party in the town hall Wednesday night. Refreshments were served at a late hour.

Mr. and Mrs. James Shannon of Joliet were guests Tuesday in the Joseph Miller home.

The ball game Sunday afternoon between Mokena boys and the Homer A. C. team was disastrous for the Homerites, as they were defeated by a score of 5 to 1. Nevertheless, it was a good game as the score was tied 1 to 1 until the eighth inning, when an error was made by one of the A. C. boys and Mokena made the runs.

Florence Konow spent a portion of the past week, with her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Konow.

Mrs. Marie Ott visited with her former classmate, Miss Gladys Myers in Lockport Wednesday night.

The committee for the August Community Club party met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Christel Koehler Thursday night. It was decided to hold the party one week earlier than usual, due to the Labor Day picnic.

Hence Friday evening, August 24 has been the date set.

Miss Josephine Miller of Chicago, spent Sunday with her parents here.

Mr. and Mrs. John Palver of Hinsdale are visiting this week with the latter's brother, Edward Beaver and family. Mrs. Palver is the former Miss Mabel Beaver.

Angelo Depra entertained his mother, Depra and sister from Deerfield Sunday.

While returning from the ball game Sunday evening, Roy and Everett Holm had the misfortune to have their car collide with a truck, and considerable damage was done to their car. Fortunately no one was hurt.

Rev. H. R. Jay conducted services at the Homer Congregational church Sunday evening. His topic was "Christian Balance" and the text "Galatians 5: 16-25. Sunday school services were held in the morning at the usual hour, with the pupils of Mrs. Paddock's class having charge of the opening exercises. Monna Milton favored with a violin solo.

It was voted to have next Sunday as vacation, so there will be no services on Sunday August 26.

The following committees were announced for the Labor Day picnic which will be held in the grounds of the church and school house:

Program, Literary part, Mrs. Randall Storm and Mrs. Fred Paddock. Musical part, the pianists, Lunch, the Ladies of the Missionary Society.

Supplies for stand, George Ott, Christel Koehler and Albert Kreiger. Erection of stand, Robert Burch's Sunday school class. Games, Boys of Albert Krieger's class and Sunday Evening Club.

The Ladies of the Missionary Society are practicing for the one act play "Carpet Rag Bee" to be given in connection with their bazaar in September.

A meeting of the Student Council will be held in the church parlors on Monday evening, August 27. All members are urged to be present.

The cast selected for the play "He's My Pal" a three act comedy drama, is working hard and will present the play the fore part of September. Those taking part are June Milton, Evelyn Kopelman, Vivian Holm, Irene Parker, Anna Burch, Mrs. Hewitt, Angelo Depra, Donald O'Leary, Bruce Anderson, Everett Holm, Jerome Paddock and Robert Burch.

The Ladies Missionary Society will be entertained in the home of Miss Myra Reed and Mrs. Iola Storm on Thursday, August 30th.

ORLAND PARK

Mrs. Edgar Graves representing the International Relations Committee of the Orland Park Woman's Club attended a luncheon given by the 3rd District chairman at her home in Harvey Thursday. A discussion of the plans of the department for the coming year followed. The guests of honor were Mrs. Milton Cruse, district president and Mrs. Wm. Ricketts, first vice president.

Hans Bohl sought admission to the Cook County hospital Tuesday but owing to so many applications being ahead he was asked to return next Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Burkhardt have returned from a trip to Michigan.

Miss Lucille Schmaderke has accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Owen Wagner and children on a trip to Fort Collins, Colorado where they will visit Mr. Wagner's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Wagner.

Gasoline thieves are busy around Orland Park. Gas was syphoned out of the car of Frances Glahn while the car was in Mr. Glahn's garage.

Clifford Raschke has purchased a new Plymouth automobile.

Miss Charlyn Knox attended the birthday party at the home of Miss Alice Wagner in Palos Park in honor of Miss Wagner's birthday last Thursday night. About forty guests were present and all report a fine time.

A two piece orchestra furnished the music for dancing.

The Orland Park Royal Neighbors held their social meeting Thursday night in the Legion Hall. Mrs. George Gee, a new candidate was initiated. The hostesses were: Emma Burkhardt, Nellie Wheeler and Hazel Moore.

John Ludwig figured in an auto accident Saturday evening when his car collided with a car driven by a young man from Tinley Park. The accident occurred on 143rd street across the street from the Lutheran church. No one was hurt, but both cars were damaged.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Dilley of Alpa, Minnesota have been visiting Mrs. Dilley's brother, Wm. Beagley of Orland for the past four weeks.

Much interest has been manifested in the Kindergarten project for Orland of which Mrs. John Mullen will have charge. The Kindergarten is something new for Orland and should be well supported. Children four and five years of age will be enrolled. The first session of the new Kindergarten will be held in the M. E. parsonage on the morning of September 4th. The hours will be from 9 a. m. to 11:30 a. m. The Kindergarten will be held on the same days as the public school. Further particulars may be had at the M. E. parsonage.

Monday evening officer Lawrence Burkhardt picked up a runaway boy from Alsip. The youngster said to be about 12 years old was identified as Billy Woods and was returned to his home.

At the regular monthly meeting of the 3rd District Literature Department held at the home of its president, Mrs. Wm. H. Walker in Midlothian, the Orland Park Woman's Club was represented by Mrs. Chas. Maddox and Mrs. Edgar Graves. Mrs. Walter of Brainerd entertained with the works of several contemporary poets. Representatives of some 20 clubs gave ideas concerning their year's plans, after which the hostess served punch and cakes.

REAL COMFORT IN COAT DRESS

PATTERN 1810

Since it is perfectly obvious from the sketch how smart this house frock is, we are going to begin by calling your attention to how nice it is to slip into a coat dress the first thing in the morning or when one comes in from outdoors and wishes to get into "working clothes" as quickly as possible. One throws it around her—ties the sash—and that is that, so far as putting it on is concerned. But the enjoying of it has just begun. It is such a satisfaction to know that one is looking pretty and well dressed as one goes about doing this little thing and that—everything seems easier!

Pattern 1810 is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 16 takes 4½ yards 36-inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included. Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE. Address orders to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth street, New York City.

Smiles

UNSEEN SPIRIT

"Didn't you put up the money for that big musical show?" "Yes," answered Mr. Dustin Stax. "But your name isn't mentioned on the program." "Of course not. I'm the ghost underwriter."

Had Proof of It

She was very proud of her son's prowess. "He must be a very fast runner," she said, showing a paper to a friend. "It says here that he fairly burned up the track under his record-breaking speed, and it's true because I saw it this morning, and the track was nothing but cinders."

Truly Hard Boiled

"I say, old chap," said one freelance writer to another, "does the editor of the Paragon accept much of your stuff?"

"Him? Accept anything?" the second writer replied. "Good heavens—that man, believe me, wouldn't accept the inevitable!"

Flame of the Border

SYNOPSIS

Seeking death to escape dishonor at the hands of a drunken desperado, Sonya Savarin allows herself to be rescued by her suddenly repentant attacker. The girl is a self-appointed physician to the Navajo Indians, living on an Arizona sheep ranch with her brother, her wife, Lila, and their small daughter, Babs. She is engaged to Rodney Blake, wealthy New Yorker, but her heart is with the friendly Navajos and she evades a wedding. Sonya pulls Little Moon, wife of Two Fingers, a Navajo, through the crisis of an illness. Two Fingers is deeply grateful. Sonya again meets the man whose advances she had repulsed on Lone Mesa. He tells her he bitterly regrets his action. Sonya is affected but unforgetting. On Lone Mesa she again comes upon the strange young man. When he reiterates his sorrow over his misconduct, she indicates forgiveness and urges him to abandon his life of lawlessness. From concealment, Sonya witnesses the transference of objects from an airplane to her attacker. At a dance she demands that he tell her his name. He says he is Starr Stone, but that he goes by a different name in this region. He leaves the dance with a tall, fierce Mexican, with whom she is mysteriously associated. Sonya realizes she is falling in love with a man whom she can only class as a renegade and outlaw, and that she can never marry Blake. An influenza epidemic among the Indians keeps Sonya busy. She and Stone declare their love for each other, all doubt in the mind of the girl being ended. The Mexican bandit, pursuing the pair at a meeting place, takes Stone away, and warns the girl hereafter to let his "lieutenant" alone.

CHAPTER IX

—12—

The Dark Threat Falls.

Rodney Blake had brought a friend with him. A tall, quiet man by the name of Marston. Sonya, herself again to all outward appearances, met him at breakfast. His face arrested her. A keen face, but still as arctic ice, its eyes penetrating everything they met.

She felt uneasy under them, as if they could read the secret of her heart. Rod seemed to know him well.

But she was soon so taken up with her own problem that she had no time to study this stranger who sat and smoked and asked odd questions of her: her problem of what and when to tell Rod Blake, how to break her sacred word, to ask him to release her. Rod, who had said that no man, no people, no country should ever take her from him. But Mr. Marston's questions were very strange. Were there any people in the country whom he, Sonya, did not know? Any strangers about? Any airplanes flying off the regular lane above the new port at Williams?

"No," said Sonya positively, "only the regular mail planes, and they're so far off that we only hear their engines. Why?"

"Just wondered," said John Marston.

But Rodney Blake smiled and leaned forward, tapping his cigarette ash in his saucer.

"I may as well tell you, folks, that you're entertaining an angel unawares—or rather, to quote the gentry he's always after, a fallen one. Mr. Marston is the government's crack man of the secret service, whose rare talents are enlisted only as a last resort. He is here on a mission of his own. I merely accompanied him as an excuse to be here."

He smiled and looked at Sonya.

Marston fingered his cigarette, looking down gravely.

"For months our department in New York has been puzzled by a certain matter, a serious matter to this country, which has been bafflingly mysterious. By our department I mean the federal narcotics bureau. A steady flow of 'mud,' or pure raw opium, has been coming through, which we could not trace. We have reason to believe it is coming in on the west coast of Mexico—at Mazatlan, to be exact—brought inland and across the Border by fast and private planes, and sent east by train, from somewhere about the middle of the line. I am here—about the middle—to see what I can see. I need not tell you that this knowledge is dangerous for anyone to possess, and that it must be held in the utmost confidence—chiefly because of that one across the Border—El Capitán Diablo, as he is known—who is Mexico's king racketeer. Anyone tampering with El Capitán tampers with this. I should not have told you this if Rod had not spoken as he did. Let me impress again the danger of any mention of this affair to anyone."

Sonya Savarin wet her lips, which had suddenly gone dry, laid down the knife in her trembling hand.

She had her answer at last!

The answer to that night on the dance hall floor—to the little gray ship settling so swiftly on the sand at the canyon's mouth—to Starr Stone's renunciation of love and all it meant. The answer to Starr Stone himself.

And that answer was—El Capitán Diablo. El Capitán Diablo who terrorized the north of Mexico, who raided mines, who levied taxes on the poor, and who—crucified his double-crossers!

To know too much of El Capitán Diablo and ever leave his service was to die—and one's friend also who might share that knowledge. One's friend's friends, maybe, his relatives. With dilated eyes the girl looked round the table, at Sonya, at Lila, at little Babs. Lila's face was pale, but Sonya was talking eagerly.

"By George!" he was saying, his fist on the table, "there have been strangers here—and I'd stake my last dollar. Sonya, you remember that chap you danced with at the Neidlingers' and the funny thing that happened?" Sonya did not speak, and Sonya went on excitedly.

"There was a dance at a neighboring ranch, and my sister was dancing with a stranger when the biggest Mexican I ever saw appeared and dropped a hand on the stranger's shoulder. The man followed him out. I'd forgotten the incident."

"What sort of looking Mexican?" "Don't know, only that he was monstrously tall and broad."

Marston sat in silence for a little time.

"El Capitán stands six feet three in his boots," he said.

"Then who was the man he took away?"

"If I should make a guess, which I never do," said the other, "I'd say it was Quince—Keenath—Number Fifteen—the wildest white man in Mexico, and El Diablo's ablest lieutenant. I've heard of him. But his master owns him body and soul. They say on the Border that twice El Capitán's 'spread him up,' after his amusing little custom of crucifying any and all who incur his anger, only to take him down again. He's too valuable to kill. But some day the butcher will be too mad to think of that. I'd hate to be in Quince's shoes."

Sick to her foundations, Sonya Savarin excused herself.

And John Marston looked curiously after her.

The rest of that day was like a nightmare to Sonya.

She had to be about the house, to help Lila with the work, and Rod was everywhere she went, leaning fondly on her shoulder, tipping her face to look into her eyes, whispering of that future which she knew could never be. Misery was her portion through it all. She sorrowed for the blow she must deal him sooner or was hastily putting something in the pocket of his white linen vest as he came, and fumbled his damp hand free to greet her.

Now, as he reached out his hand, the small object which he had so hastily hidden in the sagging pocket tumbled out. It struck the floor with a strange sound of weight and for some reason Sonya stooped and picked it up even before the man could catch it as it fell.

"I'll take it," he said quickly, "give it here."

But again for some dim reason Sonya held the little thing and looked at it curiously.

It was a flat, narrow can about the size of the little can in which Sonya Savarin got his tobacco for his pipe, and it was shaped very much the same, having a rounded top and a flat bottom.

But there the similarity ceased, for this container was made of solid brass and thickly and beautifully carved with Chinese characters, while at the lower edge the small, belligerent figure of a fighting cock stood boldly out in bas relief.

And it was unbelievably heavy for its size.

This much she saw and felt before the proprietor of the store reached out and took it from her so quickly as to be rude. He fairly snatched it and dropped it once more in the sagging pocket.

Then he laughed unctuously, rubbing his wet palms together.

"A new tobacco, Miss Sonya," he said, "for my personal use. Very select and, I may say, costly. Now, what can I do for you today?"

Looking at him curiously Sonya named her small purchases, and he bustled about, getting them from shelf and bin. And turning idly the girl looked directly into two dark faces under Mexican hats which peered furtively at her from around the door jamb. She knew with a thrill of portent that they were the same two men whom she had seen that day long back with Starr Stone, when he had brought her purchases out to the car in Park's place.

Their black eyes stared steadily at her, and turning again she caught a flash between them and the store's owner.

Chilled and frightened, she gathered her things and went swiftly out, mounted Darkness and rode from the town at a long lope. She knew instinctively that she had stumbled on something of importance, and that Parks was, in some dim way, a part of it.

Oh, what was it all about! Where was Starr Stone, and what would his master do to him?

Starr Stone—and Parks—and planes—and contraband sent east from somewhere along the Border—about the middle—about here.

She knew—deep in her heart she knew—what Mr. Marston would give a lot to know, what he had come here to find. What Rod Blake would help him find if he knew. Rod Blake—Rod Blake on Starr Stone's trail. He would be as unrelenting as El Capitán if once he knew all the shining things, the sweet things, that Sonya knew, the dark things, the evil things which she knew, too. The whole terrible thing was too much for one girl's loving heart to hold, and Sonya felt as if the bottom were falling from the universe, as if soon she and all her little world would be destroyed.

Her hands, clenched tight on her reins, were ice cold, the heart in her breast as cold. And the shadows of twilight were beginning to fall across the great levels of the sage, the sun was down behind the Bad Lands.

And then, from high up and far away, a sound fell on her ears, the thin small sound of engines in the blue coming rapidly nearer. She stopped and looked up anxiously, and presently she saw it—a tiny speck that grew and lowered until it was circling over her, seeking a place to land.

It was the little gray ship she had seen before, the powerful blunt-nosed thing which could land and take off with such incredible swiftness. It was down, its bounding tail ruffled, its engine throttled down but running, and a man was climbing over the side, coming toward her across the sand. Was it, could it be, Starr Stone?

She peered hard for a glint of bronze hair beneath his helmet, but could not see it, nor his eyes behind the disfiguring goggles.

And then he was here, close at Darkness' head, and his hand was on the bit. She saw then that he was dark, a Mexican—that another like him was coming from the ship—and then stark drama took the silence and the still shadows.

For Sonya Savarin, fighting for her life, came out of her saddle, saw Darkness sailing away in a panic of fright, his empty stirrups flying—felt the sand giving under her stubborn feet, saw the ship loom large as her captors brought her, struggling, to it—felt her hands held behind her. She was lifted up and put over the side into a gray leather seat, a strap was buckled tightly around her. The man who had first approached her climbed into the pilot's seat, the other squeezed in somewhere at her back and side, the engine roared for a moment, the plane quivered, surged ahead, surged faster, its tail came up, and almost immediately the vast spread of the desert began to drop away beneath.

With a gasp stifled on her athen lips Sonya Savarin was away among the stars.

HOSEA PREACHES GOD'S LOVE

LESSON TEXT—Hosea 11:1-4, 8, 9; 14:3-9.

GOLDEN TEXT—For God so loved the world, that he gave his only-begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. John 3:16.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God's Wonderful Love.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Hosea Preaches God's Unfailing Love.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How God Shows His Love.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—All for Christ.

Hosea's message was primarily to Israel. The nation was outwardly prosperous, for its height of temporal glory was reached in the time of Jeroboam II (II Kings 14-18). With this prosperity came luxury, immorality, and apostasy. Calf worship and Baal worship were substituted for worship of the true God. With the increase of wealth in our age has come luxury, corruption, and gross wickedness. Hosea's message is therefore a vital one for us now.

1. Israel's Apostasy (Hosea 1-3).

Her covenant relationship with Jehovah was presented under the figure of a marriage. Their spiritual whoredom is symbolized by the example of an unfaithful wife.

1. The marriage (1:1-2). Hosea was commanded by God to take an unchaste woman to be his wife. It was designed to show God's wonderful condescension and love in entering into covenant relationship with a nation of such immorality. The nation had no more to commend it at the time of God's choice than this unchaste woman when Hosea contracted marriage with her.

2. The unfaithful wife (ch. 2). Notwithstanding the wonderful condescension on the part of the prophet in contracting marriage with this woman, Gomer departs from him to consort with her former base lovers. This shows Israel's base ingratitude in their departure from God and going after idols. Sore chastisement fell upon her for her unfaithfulness.

3. The command to love Gomer, the unfaithful wife (ch. 3). This illustrates God's love for Israel.

11. God's Love for Israel (11:1-4, 8, 9).

1. Its beginning (v. 1). It began when Israel as a nation was in its childhood.

2. How it expressed itself (vv. 1-9). a. In calling it out of Egypt (v. 1). God called Israel out of the bondage of Egypt and brought them into Canaan, the land of freedom, flowing with milk and honey. Such love and favor placed Israel under peculiar obligation to God.

b. He taught Ephraim to walk (v. 3). In spite of Israel's backsliding (v. 2), God is represented as teaching Israel how to walk, even as a father takes his child by the arms to sustain it while endeavoring to walk. God even watched over Israel as parents watch over their children by night.

c. "I drew them with cords of a man" (v. 4). Observe that his drawing was not with a stout rope as used with an unruly heifer (10:11), but a cord such as a man could bear.

d. He took off the yoke from the jaws and placed food before them (v. 4). The figure is of a husbandman lifting the yoke from the oxen so that they could eat.

e. His unwillingness to give them up (vv. 8, 9). In spite of all Israel's sins God was unwilling to destroy them.

111. God's Urgent Call for Repentance (ch. 14).

Notwithstanding their awful sins, God urged Israel to turn unto him.

1. Appropriate words of confession were put into their mouth (v. 1-3).

a. "Take away all iniquity" (v. 2). This is the nation's request to God.

b. "Receive us graciously" (v. 2). This request is accompanied by the promise to worship God on their return.

c. "Asshur shall not save us" (v. 3). They were made conscious that even the strong nation of Assyria could not save them.

d. They will not say any more that their idols can save them (v. 3).

2. Gracious promises given in response to their confession.

a. "I will heal their backsliding" (v. 4). This healing was on the condition of frank and full confession.

b. "I will love them freely" (v. 4).

c. "I will be as the dew unto Israel" (v. 5). This means that God would refresh the nation.

d. Growth promised (v. 5).

e. Beauty assured (v. 6).

f. A pleasant fragrance (v. 7) This is a picture of the restored nation.

3. Idolatry to be abandoned (v. 8).

4. The Lord's ways are acknowledged as right (v. 9).

To Preserve the Church

We are not the ones who can preserve the church; our ancestors were not the ones; our descendants will also not be able to do it, he it has been still, and will be who says: "I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."—M. Luther.

Needs No Defence

C. H. Spurgeon was once asked if he could defend the Bible. "Defend it!" he exclaimed: "I would as soon defend a lion. Let it out; it can defend itself."

The Man I Love

By WALDO THAYER

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate
WNU Service.

YOU'RE gathered around to hear this last will and testament—gathered, I shall presume, as I instructed Mr. Attorney Willetts to have you. Beatrice on his left, Dick across from her, and Fred at the far end of the table. As I write I have a nice picture of you waiting eagerly for the important part of this.

Well, you shan't be kept in suspense long, my dears; though perhaps what's coming won't quite fulfill your expectations. You see, I'm putting this down just as I feel it, without any "I, Nancy Gregg, being of sound mind" rigamarole. That's principally so there can't be any misunderstanding of what I have to say to you.

You three have been close to me during these last nine years—at least, so you think. In all that time, not one of you has missed spending some hours with me each day. My wants have been cared for by you jointly—using my money, of course. Each of you has possessed the same motive: desire to be the one or among the ones called to hear the reading of this document. And so it is.

To you I shall speak first, Beatrice, for you were the first to figure in this new life of mine—this bitter, bedridden mock of an existence. You it was who rushed to me in the hospital as soon as the studio notified you of my accident. And how grateful I was then for that apparent sisterly solicitude! It really wasn't until after the first year that I saw in you a duplicate of the wretched man we once called father.

For nine straight years you've been, in ever-mounting degree, a liar and a cheat. On four occasions that I'm certain of you've plotted to poison me and only held back through the most craven sort of fear. Does that make you know how thoroughly I've been aware of all you thought hidden? To you I make one bequest, Beatrice—the bed in which I have lain for this eternity shall be yours—if you keep and sleep in it yourself.

And now, Fred. All I have said already may be repeated to you; yet I feel no hatred, for you have been only weak and silly. Those you always were, too. I remember clearly your absurd, vain little mannerisms as we played that scene together the day I fell.

And ever since, day after weary day, you have come mincing in to see me with great sorrowful cow eyes and second-grade roses. Could you think me so stupid as not to realize you stayed hours after your brief visits to my room, often overnight? That your chief mission in life was to console Beatrice for her "privations" and "sacrifices," so that you might attain a firm grip upon my estate? You foolish, transparent little charlatan! I will you the lovely plaster cast which has embraced my body so many years.

As for your part, Dick, it is too shoddily shameful to dwell on long. To you I was engaged when it happened. Staunchly you reaffirmed devotion and your desire to marry. Only the strange new sanity of vision I had somehow acquired saved me from being fool enough to accept. Of course you were eager! I had a million and a half, you nothing; and an invalid wife in those circumstances would be ideal. And, since six months after my refusal, I have been aware that you were living on sums from my account, extorted through blackmail threats from Beatrice. To you, my gallant cavalier, I tender as a last gift the love letters you wrote me when we were young. May they bring you pleasure.

And so to the ending. One person there is, there has been, in all this wilderness of melancholy and disillusion who means anything of worth of joy, to me. He is the man whose tender, yet wholly professional, ministrations have made this sluggish hell of inch-by-inch dying bearable. Kind and wise and wonderful, he has entered into my heart, become the sole object of such full and genuine emotions as I may still know. It is my single happiness now at last to bequeath without reservation, save as heretofore enumerated, all I own to Dr. John Renny.

One final word: Perhaps you who hear this wonder why he is not present. It is because I wish to spare him the unpleasantness of coming again into this house until all of you have left it forever. Therefore he has been notified privately of this will's terms. The rest of you will now please go, that the man I love may come home, for thus I like to think of it.

For a moment after the lawyer's droning voice ceased, there was no sound. Then savagely a chair scraped back and the large gray-haired man on his right arose.

"Well, of all the wild, monomaniacal messes I ever heard," he stated with vehemence, "that certainly is the limit! Why, it would be child's play to have it set aside—though of course I shan't dream of doing any such thing. I dare say our fine friend, the so clever doctor, has been notified and is waiting in high glee to take possession?"

Attorney Willetts slowly raised his head to meet the other's eyes. His tone's tempo matched that of his moment.

"No," he said, "not exactly. I myself went this morning to tell Doctor Renny. His office door was open. He was in his chair, dead from a dose of cyanide. A framed photograph of Nancy Gregg lay face down on his desk. Under it I found a note which said simply: 'I'm coming, dearest.'"

TRACES DESCENT OF BIRDS FROM FLYING REPTILES

All birds descended from flying reptiles with teeth, according to Dr. Alexander Wetmore, assistant secretary of the Smithsonian institution. He has traced the family history of the birds back to the grotesque archopteryx and archeornis, nature's first attempts at bird making. At the top of the scale of evolution are the songbirds, while the most primitive birds living today are the ostrich and the penguin.

The story of the Wright brothers is well known. But how did the first flying reptile manage to "take off"? There were few airports at that time and those were not equipped with modern safety devices. None of the animals or reptiles had made a trans-Atlantic flight or a journey to the stratosphere and there were no birds to soar and glide gracefully through the air. Flying existed only in the mind's eye of the lowly though imaginative reptile, and while it had a good set of teeth, it could not use them in such an undertaking.

This happened about 150,000,000 years ago, and we are frequently reminded that evolution can accomplish wonders in millions of years. But it cannot be rushed. The copperheads, rattlesnakes, water moccasins and black snakes of the Ozarks have never sprouted wings, nor has any one of them ever been heard to sing like a mocking bird. Their offspring always lack both the ambition and the ability to fly. But that does not mean they will always remain as they are, unless, indeed, evolution sometimes runs into a blind alley, a possibility suggested by Doctor Wetmore himself.

He ventures the opinion that birds may have reached the end of the evolutionary road, because he says, civilized man is disturbing the natural conditions of the earth. And if birds will never become reptiles, perhaps reptiles will never become birds.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Mrs. C. L. Gaddis since July will, return to their home in Dallas, Texas.

A lot of favorable sentiment is being expressed in favor of the beginning of a circulating water system. Dead ends cause the water to smell and to be useless. The present water system has dead ends in the vicinity of the school and the water at the school is not as pure as it might be. The idea advanced is if the water mains running by the school would be run up Niethammer avenue to Front street, it would be a means of supplying fresh water to the school and residents along these streets and would also mean better fire protection.

The cost would not be very high and would not be a hardship on any one. Later on when conditions warrant other sections of the water system could be connected to complete the circulating system.

FRANKFORT

The picnic held last Thursday in the Frankfort Grove by the Men's Endeavor Society of the Frankfort M. E. church was well attended and all present had a fine time. In the evening a delightful program of Hawaiian music was presented by the Hall Trio of Mokena.

ORLAND PARK

The Orland Park Parent Teachers Association is beginning an active campaign for membership for the coming year. This organization has filled an important post in connecting the home and the school during the years of its existence.
Every parent who has children attending the public school should feel that it is their duty to support and co-operate with this organization. Every citizen, whether they have children in school or not,
should, as a matter of civic loyalty, manifest their good will and interest in the school by becoming members.
The cost is very small (only fifty cents a year), but the benefits are great—great to the school and great to those who take pride in the public school and its achievements. It provides besides a civic forum, a place for social intercourse, for better understanding of your neighbors for education and for many a happy social evening.

Mrs. Lawrence Uthe and Mrs.
Ted Rust will endeavor to contact every parent in Orland. When they solicit your membership, let everyone feel that it is a civic duty and a privilege to become a member of the Parent-Teachers Association.

CHILD BADLY

BITTEN BY DOG

Lorette Germenz, 11 years old,
of New Lenox, was severely bitten about the head by a dog owned by Louis Hoffman of Spencer, while playing with the animal in the drive way of the Hoffman home last Friday night.

The child, in company with a group of other girls had gone to the Hoffman home to visit. The Ger-menz girl was playing with the dog when it suddenly leaped upon her and bit her on the forehead.

Dr. Jeanette Holt of New Lenox was summoned and administered first aid. The dog was ordered placed under observation for 10 days to determine whether it is afflicted with rabies.

Slaves Were Shaved

A clean-shaven face in the East was originally a sign of servitude. Old pictures show kings and conquerors heavily bearded and with long hair, while their slaves and captives are clean-shaven and close-cropped. The Greeks and the Romans later discarded "face fungus," as it gave their enemies a hand-hold in the close fighting, which was, of course, the rule in those days.

Voice of a Snake

Besides the little hiss that seems to be common with most snakes they are generally incompetent to make any the big water python or anaconda of Brazil, which gives a peculiar piercing cry at night.

Who Says That Nobody Loves a Policeman?

There is one thing sure... that isn't true so far, at least, as Officer Finney is concerned.

You know Finney—Finney
of the Force—whose comical adventures are portrayed for readers of this paper by Ted O'Loughlin, brilliant young artist.

This genial copper gets a lot of fun out of the things that happen day by day as he travels his beat, and the fun is passed on to you as you read of his activities.

Have a laugh with Finney and tell your friends about him.
